Offtopic, but I'm reading George Harvey's book right now and it had this passage:

"We used to fish a pretty good stream a few miles from Pittsburgh - Deer Creek. It empties into the Allegheny River's right bank as you go downriver. We'd drive up there in the evening and fish the lower couple of miles. It wasn't a big stream, but there were wild trout in it. I didn't fish any other streams in south-west Pennsylvania".

I love reading these old books and seeing things like that....
