

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Schuylkill River: Continues to return from the dead: wild ST

Re: Schuylkill River: Continues to return from the dead: wild ST

Author: : marcq

Date: : 2013/9/24 18:24:22

URL:

I could honestly care less if the flatties ate all the small mouth. IMO they put up a way better fight. I am hoping to see 100 pounders pulled out in the next 10 years. sorry to say it but they are here to stay. there is no way to get rid of them. my buddies and I have had 15 to 20 fish nights. the biggest I have pulled was a 42 pounder. from what I remember is pretty much the same as its always has been in the river. I think the real fish you have to look out for is the snakeheads. they are in the lower river and I have seen them destroying fish this past summer. I thought it was cool but they don't really take lures. snagging them is the way to go. they are apparently here to stay as well. so get ready to have your river taken over by invasive species. I honestly think we are ok. they are not wrecking havoc like everyone said. everything has a way of working out. JMHO