My thinking in my earlier post was that the rip rap is what would make it a debris trap.

But if it is big enough (compared to the stream), debris won't be an issue. It will act like a bridge.

I did notice the road crews over here replacing a few old bridges and culverts with long rectangular concrete tubes. It looked to me like it would have the same result only no rip rap needed. The arch is however stronger.

I'm not a civil engineer though.
