Okay thanks, sounds like low and clear it is.

I was reading this article (<http://www.flyfisherman.com/2012/06/18/high-and-dry/#axzz2fumVyyCCv>) from a guide who uses dry flies for steelhead, and a dry dropper type of rig, with a dry fly on top and a nymph or wet on the bottom. I was thinking about trying this out, and was wondering if anyone could help me out, and point me in the direction of good tying instructions of a yellow stimulator dry, or of something similar to the "Erie-sistable" fly he speaks of?

Interestingly enough...there was some bug activity on one of the slow pools yesterday and a couple (and I mean a only a couple) steelhead did rise. Now I can't tell you if they were rising for bugs and it would be a complete crap shoot tossing a dry on that pond, but it would have been fun to see one hit a dry fly.
