The #1 item I see many people without in Erie is polarized glasses. These fish average in the 6lb range and it's amazing how they can blend in with their surroundings. I pride myself in catching fish in places that people have walked by all day long. Find a fishy spot and just stare at it for a solid minute or longer. Don't cast. If you see movement then position yourself in the right place and make the first cast count. I get the skunk off many times by finding these fish and get more satisfaction in hearing people say "I didn't think there was a fish in there".

btw, there's never any fish in the streams 😊
