

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : big brown in a small freestone

Re: big brown in a small freestone

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2013/9/26 12:33:21

URL:

Quote:

Stenonema wrote:

pccray, I agree. The first cast is the only cast on most small stream, big brown cases.

\

troutbert, Amazon was a term used to describe an attractive extraordinarily tall women in the eighties. I referenced the term as more of a style of tying the beetle.

Perhaps we should move to the Fly Tying section and design this new pattern, that we could call The Amazon Beetle or even the Waking Beetle. I'm picturing spun deer hair as big as a half dollar, loosely trimmed leaving some fibers out the back like wing tips and maybe some large round rubber legs.

My recollection of the term "amazon" in reference to a woman was one who as very muscular and tall. Not necessarily good looking. Unless you have a thing for tall muscular women in which case any of them would be good looking.

So i think the name amazon beetle fits regardless how good lookin it is tied.