From their website:

Why?

Because we have found that the established market has created an expansive gap between the production costs of high end products and the cost passed onto the customer.

What does this mean?

Shadow charges less to the customer while still paying the high production cost that comes with producing a top of the line product

Does anyone know where the blanks are rolled?

Nice (and refreshing) business concept. And beautiful rods.

Is the whole process PA or USA manufactured?
