Good report.

Reports of poor or tough fishing are valuable too and help keep things in proper perspective.

I've often found that the sort of low, very clear conditions that currently exist on our bass rivers make for good wading but the fishing is often tough when the sun is high. Best to hit the rivers very early or at sunset under these conditions. With the cooler water temps, it's sometimes better in the evenings than morning - but yuh never know.

We could use some rain.
