
Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : TU Article: At What Price Glory

Re: TU Article: At What Price Glory

Author: : k-bob

Date: : 2013/10/2 10:54:10

URL:

"At the end of the day, the reality is, we've ALL done it."

Keep a fish out of water for a long time to take a pic? nope. I put fish back fast. by the time people get there with camera fish is gone.

I don't count or measure fish, beyond knowing that butt-to-grip-end of my usual brookie rod just less than ten inches. If I want, I can compare in an instant, and the fish is on its way.

Have super simple Fuji water and shockproof camera in ez-access vest pocket: fast image if I want one.

Pictures, btw, don't prove how big a fish is, still have to believe the fisherman, some variability there :)

last fish pic I took below. fun to try when they're back in the water.

for brookie fishing, stream images are imho more interesting than fish images anyhow...

Attach file:

 9949593714_f936be60f5_z.jpg (231.60 KB)

 10037975215_d94c173227.jpg (197.37 KB)

