

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Time of Year and Trout

Re: Time of Year and Trout

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/10/2 20:06:25

URL:

What Tulenkot said.

I too am usually after bass in summer and early fall but winter is trout time. There isn't a lot of bug activity in winter although midges can be pretty common on sunny days and these will sometimes bring fish up. Streams that are "limestone" - meaning they are fed by springs more than run off - will usually have warmer water and more active trout during cold periods. If you visit a trout stream and it is locked in ice, the fishing is likely to be very poor and you may wish to do something else. Nevertheless, trout can be caught even in icy conditions, esp brook trout in mountain streams.