

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Is making your own leaders worth the trouble?

Re: Is making your own leaders worth the trouble?

Author: : Six-Gun

Date: : 2013/10/3 1:59:26

URL:

Well, for the moment, I stuck with what I had and went with blood knot leader I made a couple days ago to fish a river I hadn't previously explored today. I just posted a report detailing the results:

<http://www.paflyfish.com/forums/open-forums/beginner-forum/got-to-use-my-first-hand-tied-leader/21,32382.html>

All in all, it worked out very well. I surprised that the knot points didn't collect any debris all day, something I was all but certain that I would have to deal with but thankfully didn't. Casting was smooth and the leader stood up to solid 6 hours of fishing without breaking.