

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : TU Article: At What Price Glory

Re: TU Article: At What Price Glory

Author: : RyanR

Date: : 2013/10/3 14:11:46

URL:

Quote:

PatrickC wrote:

<http://online.qmags.com/TU0913S#pg1&mode2>

This article is in the Fall 2013 Trout magazine and just happens to be the current online sample that anyone can read. A topic we discuss often on numerous threads. At the end of the day, the reality is, we've ALL done it. We have to get better with it. This a a good article that we can all learn something from. Good stuff, take a read!

I think I can say, with a touch of caution, that it's not my reality which is why I do not have a picture of my best wild trout ever, an honest 20" from a small stream. I'm a lot like Pennypack flyer on this in that I too am so concerned for the fish's survival that I usually do not take photos. Of the few photos I have taken, probably 99% of them have been of the fish in a C&R net and lifted inches from the water for a second or two before release. I agree though it's a good article and we can all learn from it.