My wallet pulled a disappearing act on me once - I laid it on the top of my truck after finishing up fishing Young Womans Creek. I drove down the road, and hopped onto route 120. About 15 miles down the road, it occurred to me my wallet was not in my pocket, and no amount of rustling through the junk in the console could make the wallet appear, because my head knew I had left it on the top of the truck. Having never lost a wallet before, I began to try and figure out how to go about canceling all the junk that is in it. I pulled over at the first place and got out. Checked the roof, in case some how, incredibly, it had stayed in place. It had not. It had, however, fallen into the bed of the truck, which probably means it fell off as I was accelerating straight. It could have just as easily fell off to the side, while going around a curve.

Hope you find your reel or whoever find it connects with this thread and is able to return it to you.
