Updated tyer's list:

SBecker – TBD

Eunanhendron - Demo winged wet flies, salmon flies and streamers

Volsnurse – Wicked foam beetle

Frequenttyer – Orange stimulator

It's hard to believe its already time to think about the tying jam. This year just flew by!

I'm going to demo an orange stimulator which is a really versatile pattern that gives a lot of guys (myself included) problems. I may be taking tips from the audience 😊

I “borrowed” the following from one of HA's posts last year. it provides some good advice for jam tyers that I think is worth repeating.

For those that don't know, TBD stands for "To Be Decided". The sooner the tyers can pick their pattern, the better. This allows others the opportunity to choose something not listed, although duplicates aren't out of bounds. Just pick something you feel comfortable tying (and explaining as you go) within the 15 minute time limit.

It really helps if you practice your "demo" beforehand, especially to keep within the time limit. Having all materials laid out beforehand is also good. We've got 8 hours to tie, vs 4 hours we had last year. This means we should be able to fit about 30 tyers into the rotation. If we have extra time, that time will be used for Q & A sessions following each demo.

We request that the tyers explain techniques as they go, rather than just tying the fly, and explaining afterwards. This can easily make a 5 minute tie into a 15 minute tie, so be prepared. 😊
