The idea that 'public outrage' makes Class A designation impossible is not an honest argument. What about our public outrage?

We're the minority - angler surveys have shown that we're a SMALL minority. You'd be surprised how many people think that trout in our streams only come from the white truck fleet. The concept of a wild, naturally reproducing, self sustaining trout population is a concept not understood by many anglers.

Looks to me like the PFBC is picking their battles wisely - they can win this one and provide some real tangible benefits for these streams.

As much as I'd like to see Class A designation with no stocking, I'll take the "half full" glass.
