Swattie87, I saw the two vehicles parked near meter but did not see you. The foam/suds are not normal. You are correct that the higher volume did trigger the increase...but that would disapeate. This did not look natural to me. When the is a strong storm the Letort becomes gray and filled with junk. What was not normal was the soap suds being seen in such volume from the route 11 bridge out threw the mouth. I fished above the route 11 and witnessed just very cloudy water. I will be able to follow threw at a later time...back to work. BTW...I posted a fish pic from last evening in the fish photo section.
