I didn't know there were brownies in Indian Creek?!?!?!?

In fact, the last time I was there about two weeks ago I caught a fat brownie that was probably a holdover. Over the years, I've caught brownies, rainbows, stocked brookies and even natives. And like I said before I don't fish it that often and when I do, I rarely stay for more than an hour.

SOME SCATTERED THOUGHTS ABOUT INDIAN:

I do remember more insects years ago. One of the best days I had was many years ago fishing March Browns in early May.

It is very tight, brushy, and silted in places, with plenty of barren stretches. But if you know where you are going, you can certainly jump from spot to spot and consistently catch fish. But fly fishing is always a challenge.

With the exception of the pool at the bridge, I rarely see rising fish in that stream.

It tends to remain relatively cool at certain stretches...

where Camp Run comes in for example.
