Well I'm old enough to have sniff out a lot of them in bucks but still young enough to not have to write them down to remember them..

Since you left here Sandfly, the building has come to more or less of a halt, which has given the multiple conservation groups time to catch up and dig in while it slowly starts up again.

Someone nuked the local wild rainbow hole here not too long ago, but seems that will not matter as we are working on adding a new restored pure limestone to the list shortly (and on public land to boot) Another known stream also recently had some milage added to the public domain.

It's a pretty good time to be a trout in Bucks Co, and not to bad to be a FF too..
