Hang in there and keep working at it and you will get it. I am with all the advise offered but at the end of the day it will have to just become a natural instinct when to set the hook. And there some days it just works out that you seem to miss a lot of hook sets.

One of the things that I saw mess with a old friend of mine who finally broke down and bought a new rod a few years ago. He was so use to his old style rod that the fast action of his new rod had him yanking the fly out of the fishes mouth setting the hook till he realized what was happening.
