Thanks all,
Fishing Creek is probably my #1 stream, and like squaretail said; not because of catching a lot of fish but because of the quality of the fish you do catch. Fishing creek was probably my hardest obstacle while I was in college learning to catch wild trout. I still remember my first trout there, it was during the grannom hatch, I worked and worked to catch a fish but couldn't. I was fiddling with something on my vest and didn't realize I had let my line flow down the stream and was about 20 feet below me. My peacock caddis had sank, and I wasn't paying attention, messing with my vest and all of a sudden my rod was about yanked out of under my arm. It was a total surprise and kind of made me mad that I worked hard and couldn't get one but at a stupid time of course one was there.
Fishing creek isn't a numbers stream, ive never had a double digit day there like you can on spring or on the little j. Back in the spring I came close with 8 but just couldn't get there. Its a far drive for me, but I never regret going there.
