If you're not familiar with the lehigh I would say that the obvious access points are a good bet. That would be bowmanstown right off of rte. 248, glen onoko in Jim Thorpe, rockport access, white haven, and the Francis e. Walter dam. Also there is some access in hickory run state park. The area around rockport has been fishing good for me since early September. I've been catching some nice browns. I haven't been down there in about a week and a half but hatches were good but unpredictable. If you want some more info about the gorge, PM me, I live about 2 miles from the river. Also I would give the guys at the evening hatch a call or a visit. I'm sure they will have some good info for you.
