On Tuesday, Oct. 29, the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission Striped Bass Management Board will be meeting. Given your new interest in stripers and what you heard about catches being down, you may be interested in what actions, if any, the Board takes at this meeting following a report on the stock status or other related striped bass population topics from the striped bass technical committee representative. It may interest you that Pa. has a seat on that Board despite Pa's being "small potatoes" in the striped bass world. Nevertheless, Pa's vote counts as much as that of Maryland or Massachusetts, for instance. Keep an eye on the ASMFC web site for news releases about striped bass following the meeting www.asmfc.org.

Pa has representatives on other ASMFC technical committees and Boards as well, including American shad and River Herring, American Eel, and Atlantic Sturgeon.

The PFBC staff is not just all about trout.
