Yes, it was low and clear, and in the pools, this year's leaves were up to 2ft deep. It was probably down 6-8" from it's typical spring/fall flows. I was thinking this combination (especially the leaves) may have moved the browns to faster runs and I fished the tumbling deep holes next to big rocks plenty with live nymphs without success. Finding no browns with live nymphs just stunned me.

Did the extreme low water this year have something to do with it?
