Seems odd to me. So guys from the US went to teh Europes to compete and got taught to tight line high stick which is something that has been done here in PA for many, many years.

The Euros were doing it a hell of a lot better than we did it. IMO, czech style nymphing is a useful technique to learn. The amount of fish that you can catch in water that you may consider too shallow or swift is suprising. Indicator rigs, or heavier tight line methods just don't work that well in this sort of water but refinements of the Eurpoean techniques allow you to effectively fish these areas.
