

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Brown Trout Migration in Poconos

Re: Brown Trout Migration in Poconos

Author: : PaulK

Date: : 2013/10/16 8:16:33

URL:

Yes, the temp was 56, which is right there for this time of year and actually just a hair colder than I find it in the spring, usually 58.

I only fish a half mile of the stream,--there's no reason to go further, as it is replete with wild browns.

Just to give you another idea of this light-switch experience I've had. This spring I released six browns at 16" each from the SAME pool over two days,---a 50' long pool. It was like a dream, like the scene from Caddyshack where the Priest can't make a bad shot. One fish I believe I caught twice.

Anyway, that same stretch--with much lower water and a base of 1ft of leaves in it about two feet under the surface---felt simply devoid of trout on Sunday. It was eerily quiet, yet I will confess there was no insect life on the surface. But to not see an errant rise on a beautiful fall day in this creek was stunning.

Thanks again for great feedback.