good job JMP.

one thing that I have been trying this fall and will continue to do next spring is catch fish in places that I have walked by in the past.

your post has given me more motivation to do just that, knowing that I will have to try to change up technique and delivery of those little nymphs, what ever the style is called as long as you can catch them that is all that matters.

you hit the nail on the head, get them flies on the bottom. I actually caught trout nymphing with dry flies. although I can't parallel park a train yet.
