I'm not sure if I haven't put enough thought into this or if you guys are making this harder than it really is.

Dry flies (in bulk) - stored in 10"x12" plastic compartment boxes. You can find them for a few dollars. They hold a pile of flies without smashing the hackle.

Dry flies (in vest) - small / cheap compartment boxes that can be found at Gander or Cabelas for $5-6. Consider stream I'll be fishing and the hatches I'd expect to see that time of year and fill one or two boxes accordingly. 4 boxes are dedicated full time...one for sulphurs, one for hendricksons, one for march browns and one for olives.

Dry fly storage / organization...cheap. Don't over think it. :)
