Goro,

There are a few very tiny tribbs that hold some brookies. I usually pick up a little native or two around the mouths of these tribbs. None of the fish are big by any means. I'm curious if any of these fish are starting to make their home in the main stream. I only really started catching these little guys within the last 2 years to be honest... Here's a pic of one of these little diamonds from this past spring.
