When using barbed hooks I don't think I've ever lost a fly off a a patch of sheep wool. Very few off of the foam patches. I have a piece of wool fleece in my chest pack and keep the flies of the day tagged on there through out the day then just open it up when I get home or back to camp and let um air dry. Far as tippet goes, yeah I know those spools weigh a ton and take up sooo much room. I usually only carry 2 sizes anyway. I have bigger problems losing flies to branches to worry about losing them off my hat band of wool patch. Like I said, if your using barbed hooks... I got trouble pull'n out of the patch to begin with.

But then again there was that time I lost a hunting license crawling through briars and it pulled a 5 inch safety pin open that I'm sure I could use as a link in a tow chain....
