

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Rainbows in Yellowstone

Re: Rainbows in Yellowstone

Author: : geebee

Date: : 2013/10/19 17:12:30

URL:

they originated these plans out West and have had limited success.

cutts have a much more restricted range than brookies, and also the two striped species are very similar and interbreed - whereas bows and brookies don't and don't hold in the same type of water.

I see what their trying to do and I appreciate it, but its a moral dilemma for many - especially in this case cos likely a fall in bows would result in a rise in eastslope cutts.

tough call. i plan to visit in 2015 too. not sure what i'll do.