Very interesting OP, and I almost never fish anything but dry flies and brookies. I probably walk by a lot of fish.

Fished a tiny brookie stream last week, and saw several fish under rocks in the very low water. Caught some other fish with dries, just staying as far back as possible or behind stuff. But of course those were brookies, not browns, which are much more spooky and less inclined to just blast dry flies all day.

Nice pictures, they make me want to go fishing.
