

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Rainbows in Yellowstone

Re: Rainbows in Yellowstone

Author: : Chaz

Date: : 2013/10/20 8:00:48

URL:

It isn't hard to do in several of the Yellowstone drainages because they could eliminate all invasives above the high falls on the Firehole, Gibbon and some of the other rivers. I was just out in Yellowstone and didn't catch a single native, shame on the dopes that stocked all those invasives.

Not a single river grayling exists anymore within the park.

I seriously doubt the doom and gloom that some say will ruin the fishing in the park. The Yellowstone Cutthroat is threatened, and the grayling doesn't exist in the parks rivers, only in 3 lakes. It may take a good marketing plan, but the cutthroat evolved there and grew quite large.