

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Rainbows in Yellowstone

Re: Rainbows in Yellowstone

Author: : Will

Date: : 2013/10/21 13:55:07

URL:

I was out there this summer. The instruction to kill bows in the Lamar drainage seems like mostly a non-issue for me, because the NPS says that if it has a red throat slash, it's a cutt and you should put it back. I've caught a fair number of cutt-bow hybrids in the lower end of Soda Butte (for example) over the years, some of which looked basically just like rainbows, but never one I can recall without that slash.