SOOOO, IT WAS YOU WHO BANDED ME FROM THAT SITE!

LOL, I wasn't banned, but I didn't know you moderated that. I wouldn't have mentioned it if I didn't like it.

It's been years since I checked it out though. I left about the time it was getting kind of ridiculous and never went back mostly because I moved and haven't fished much for steelhead in Ohio since moving to the farm.

I was told by someone on there how it wasn't much fun anymore and he wanted me to come back. I tell you what, if you don't go fishing with me this weekend, I may have to rejoin that site to test your limits. 😊

Wow, I have got to get out more.

P.S. I deliberately misspelled banned.

The difficult thing (and this is from the site owner's perspective) is that we are a site that specifically addresses the needs of those new to steelheading. Let's face it, if you are a seasoned veteran, you don't need much in the way of reports or help catching fish. The site got bogged down with a group of people that made it their personal playground and were totally abusive to folks asking the same questions that someone else had asked the season before. So, the site owner asked me to moderate because I'm willing to enforce HIS rules (I did not make up the forum rules he did...I just enforce them).

Most of the new crew is very helpful with the same old newbie questions...over and over again. That's what were here for.

Feel free to help out however you can.
