Thanks Ty: I was just silently admiring your streamers in another thread. the article I linked to in the OP includes some pics of flies tied after mastering the technique. I'll admit that it's a little difficult to get the hang of, but I stand by my previous statement that they're not much more difficult than tying wings with wood duck flanks. I'm a little discouraged by reports that they're not durable, but I do most of my fishing from the bench, and when I do get out I don't catch enough fish for durability to be much a problem, and if durability does become a problem I think it'll be problem I'm willing to live with :)
