Saw a lot of fish paired up today on a state college area stream, but they were just kind of hanging out. Caught a few that appeared to be spawned out already, and some that didn't seem ready yet darting out from under rocks after flies with no partner in sight.

Browns in a Spring Creek tributary were not spawning with the exception of two pairs. May not have been fishing good spawning habitat though.

Swattie, that's a funny story. I witnessed a turf war on a small stream back home this past May- didn't catch either one but they were really going at it!
