Although two weeks ago on a steep SC stream I did see two very brightly colored 7"ish males engaging in a rather active disagreement as to who was the owner of the hole they were occupying. I'd have to assume this was prespawn behavior as the hole was plenty big enough to support them both otherwise.

That may not have been 2 males sparring, it may have been a male and female doing the dance just before actual spawning. Or it could have been a male chasing another male away from a redd that was full of eggs, males sometimes do that, defend a redd after spawning.
