

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Sighters... Slinky Vs Braided Vs. Bobber

Sighters... Slinky Vs Braided Vs. Bobber

Author: : odizz17

Date: : 2013/10/31 9:32:06

URL:

Sighters. They come in all kinda different forms and colors. I'm going to start making sighters, and was curious what everyone's "go to" is. Personally I'm mostly a dry-dropper or high stick Nymphing kinda guy. However, I've recently had much success with the little baby thingamabobbers. Not the most stealthy, but they won't sink and are very sensitive.

This evening, I'm going to make a few braided sighters and marinade them in gink and then waterproof em. After a dozen or so, I'm going to make about a dozen "slinky" style sighters to use on the local spring creeks. So what's your sighter of choice? Braided, coiled, bobber, or the end of your fly line?