

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Help me make a gratuitious rod purchase

Re: Help me make a gratuitious rod purchase

Author: : greenlander

Date: : 2013/11/1 15:09:19

URL:

As much as rods like the Radian and the H2 are one's I'd like to have in my quiver, if "primarily for dry flies" and "primarily for small/medium water" are in your criteria list, I don't see a reason to look at either of those rods.

After all, they're both fast action rods. And not just fast action rods, current generation fast action rods. That means they're considerably faster than even the fast action rods of a few years ago (i.e. the Sage Z-Axis).

I'd look at an older generation fast action rod or a medium action rod.

I haven't cast it in quite some time, but the Scott G2 comes to mind.