Oh , I have plenty of other important things to do to. But I just take my time for fly fishing as a given. And my wife understands that. There is always something that needs done around the house, or work to do on the 3 vehicles we own now. But that's usually nothing that can't wait a little .

There is only one week for the grannoms, hendricksons, and green drakes to hatch each year. And when they're on - I'm gone.

I always try to plan on doing all of my chores in the mornings, before I got to work - which is 2nd shift for me. And leave my off days open for fishing.

So, I guess I would say that flyfishing is my top priority. And just about every thing else, is planned around it. It's a pretty nice life - if you can do it I guess!
