Last week I observed a small songbird (I could not identify) sitting on a branch very closely to a doe. It was very close (like 1 foot away) to the deer which caught my eye. I watched the bird for a minute or so. At first I saw landing on the deer's back, as I continued to watch, I saw the bird fly right on to the birds nose and pick off bugs. It would fly back to the nearby branch after every time it picked a bug off. The deer seemed to be unfazed. I watched the bird fly right at the eyes a pick off some more bugs off the deer's eyelashes. I can't believe the deer didn't rear back at least once. Pretty neat.
