A friend and I were headed in to town and saw one in a field near a busy intersection. I quickly pulled over and we jumped out to take pictures. Others noticed what we were doing and they stopped. The intersection came to a stand still as people began to pull over and get out of their vehicles. The bald eagle was quite a sight to see but what really struck me were the people who stopped. People were talking to complete strangers...all smiles, forgetting about their hurried drive home...One of those America moments you don't see to often anymore!
