I believe in 15 inch natives and believe I saw one about a month ago so yeah I can believe in 30 inch browns. From a numbers stand point if you have 1500 fish per mile then that 0.01 percent might be that big in the right streams, especially with how many miles of streams there are in PA.

I also believe when toothy critter fisherman say it was a 30 inch brown it would be fairly accurate. To them 30 inches can be a demarcation for a good pike. Like most of us regular guys looking for 15 inch plus fish rising in Spring.
