Whats the difference between the fall fish and the creek chub? How do you identify?

They're both members of the Minnow family. Fallfish grow to be much larger than Creek Chubs...If you have a fish over 10" or so, it's much more likely it's a Fallfish than Creek Chub. Fallfish in general have a more scaly appearance and a bright, flashy silver color. Creek Chubs usually have a dull black stripe down their side and don't have the flashy, reflective appearance. You can find them in the same streams, but generally Fallfish are found in faster, more Trout like lies where Creek Chubs are usually trying to avoid the current.
