

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Help on Mayfly ID

Re: Help on Mayfly ID

Author: : brookieaddict

Date: : 2013/11/8 17:03:16

URL:

You are 100% correct and I apologise, when I read JACKMs' thread it made me laugh out loud. I do the same thing to someone who asks "what there biting on", I have gotten some really hatefull looks in response. Sorry I mudied the water, carry on.

P.S. The fly in question may be a Ephemerella invaria, Ephemerella dorothea dorothea, or Eperous vitreus, or Leucrocuta hebe. It doesn't really matter as they are doing D.N.A. testing on most mayflys so the genus will remain the same but names will change in the future.