

---

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Broken Tip

Re: Broken Tip

Author: : Swattie87

Date: : 2013/11/9 9:26:01

URL:

Agree with the above. If it's a new rod, it likely has a warranty and they will likely replace the entire final section of the rod as opposed to repairing it. If there is a warranty fee or shipping costs the right thing for your buddy to do is probably cover those costs, but don't let that come between you. In the meantime, that 8 weight will work fine for your Steel trip. In any case, I don't think it's right to put him under an obligation to buy a now broken rod from you. You let him borrow it in good faith and it was an accident I'm sure.

I recently broke the last 2 inches off a 5'6 UL spinning rod. I snipped the rod down to the next eyelet and now I have a 5'3 UL spinning rod. The difference in feel and performance was minimal and the rod is still plenty usable.