I came as close as I want to come to tagging a 4-point buck tonight. I was coming back from a stream after dark and I saw a deer standing by the road. There was a barb wire fence in the direction he wanted to go and I figured he would jump it. However, instinct told me to slow down just in case, and the just in case paid off. He turned around, and walked across the road. I was still moving and came to a complete stop, about two inches from his rear. I am definitely seeing more deer on the move, with the rut and hunting pressure.
