I am no expert in Little Lehigh, but it did seem especially crowded this weekend, both in the heritage section and in the park below.

I figure the amount of space and privacy you can reasonably expect is inversely proportional to the amount of people there... and spin / bait /family fishing users tend to be less sensitive to "personal space" still, what you report seems awfully close. But again, in a mobbed public park type space, I feel that is part of the cost of doing business.
