good to raise the subject as a timely reminder here. guess the spawn will be over soon now? I only fish remote NE places, have seen some fish on redds recently.

The brookie spawn in northern PA will probably be over soon.

The brown trout spawn, though, will continue for quite a long while yet. The rest of the way through November for sure, and I have seen trout spawning well into December on Spring Creek.

The brook trout spawn mostly in the month of October. (With some trailing off into early Nov.)

The brown trout spawn mostly in the month of November. (But start in late Oct. and continue into Dec.)

My observations have been mostly in central and northcentral PA. I've heard that the timing can be a little later in the southern parts of the state, which is not surprising because the temperatures would be a little warmer further south and at lower elevation.
