It is unlawful to post that picture without consent unless you are a public figure i.e. politician , actor , etc. Ask Jack.....?

uhmmm, no. Fox is actually quite fine to post that pic, technically. If you're out in public, you really have no say in whether or not someone can take your picture and do what they want with the image. Otherwise you'd need total consent for any photo taken in any public space that contains anybody in the image...not at all practical when shooting cityscapes, sporting events, concerts, tourist attractions, etc. So, he's fine to post this pic, even if it is in bad form to think that publicly shaming this guy is an ok thing to do...
